

Delicious Soundbites vocal quartet are renowned for their witty banter, soaring harmonies and quirky original songs about ordinary life such as 'Tea for My Lover' and 'Fabulous Turquoise Coat', the title of their latest album, composed by band leader Fiona Moore.

Delicious Soundbites vocal quartet are Janet Ayers, Kelly Briant, Fiona Moore and Sandra Thibault. Janet runs choirs in Portsmouth. She and her husband Matthew Parsons sometimes support Delicious Soundbites singing and playing guitar and ukulele. Kelly Briant was a member and soloist of Delicious Sounds choir (started by Fiona in 1998). Kelly's late father was one of the Mike Sammes Singers. Fiona Moore is musical director of Get Vocal Community Choir in Chichester. She annually invites people to join a scratch choir called 'The Big Splash' for six weeks who learn and perform songs in support of WaterAid. Fiona composes songs for choirs and quartets and had her first commission in 2009 to write songs for a children's choir about the history of Hanger Farm Arts Centre. Sandra Thibault is deputy conductor of Winchester Community Choir. She runs a singing group 'Sing @ the Hilt'. She teaches dance at The Point Art and Dance Centre in Eastleigh. Sandra has been a belly dancing teacher and performer for many years. She, Kelly and Fiona were the original Delicious Soundbites trio.

They perform songs from around the world from the continent of Africa to the Arctic circle, adding belly dancing, percussion and storytelling to their shows and occasionally an invisible double bass played by band leader and composer Fiona Moore.
